Katsuyukai Katsuyukai (久米屋), also known as Katsuyukai-ji (久米屋神社) is a Shinto shrine in Osaka, Japan. It is on the eighth floor of a skyscraper in the Heian Kyodai area of Nishinomiya-ku. Katsuyukai (meaning "long-lived village") is considered one of Osaka's five Tenshudo Shrines, along with the Heian-kyo (延暦寺), Nioizaru (日置屋), Neiji (内子) and Kamihisa (神保町). History The current shrine dates back to approximately 1600-1700. A previous shrine was attached to an existing wooden pagoda. Hokkaido is said to have been a gateway between the three cultures of China, Japan and Korea. This shrine was originally in China, located in Fukuoka, but was moved to the port town of Hakata in 1717 when Commodore Matthew Perry passed through the area. There was a fire in 1869 and the shrine was rebuilt in a traditional style. About 150 years ago, the shrine was moved from Fukuoka to Sennichimae, and then on to Nishinomiya. At that time, the shrine was renamed Katsuyukai. A recently discovered relief depicting a kneeling figure with a sword illustrates an episode of the Heiji Rebellion (1582-1587). The incident was the last act of Toyotomi Hideyoshi's rule. On April 1, 1885, the shrine was rebuilt on the fifth floor of a downtown high-rise building, and this is the current form. The buildings where the shrine is located are also known as the "Shirakawa-zaka". The shirakawa is often used to indicate building buildings or structures. In the United States, the term shirakawa is used to describe the oriental pagoda. In 2001, a Japanese firm called. "Toyota" was using the name of the shrine. It was not until 2008 that the company was given permission to retain the name of the shrine. Famous people from the shrine References External links Katsuyukai - Osaka Govt. official website

Sen. Amy Klobuchar Amy KlobucharPelosi: Trump hurrying to fill SCOTUS seat so he can repeal ObamaCare House lawmakers reach deal to avert shutdown Centrist Democrats'strongly considering' discharge petition on GOP PPP bill MORE (D-Minn.) said this week that President Trump's comments about truckers on the U.S.-Mexico border are "bulls." "It's a pile of bullst," Klobuchar said during a CNN town hall on Tuesday. "There are no more jobs. The jobs we had to have the pollution, to have those dangerous hours. People are missing their kids' graduation. I mean, this is what we're facing as a country. And I think it's a real test of leadership for the president to get in his racist bed on the border." ADVERTISEMENT The Minnesota lawmaker, who was previously a prosecutor, said she is confident that the Trump administration is aware of the situation at the border and "how many jobs are out there" in the trucking industry. In an interview with the Minneapolis Star Tribune on Monday, Trump told Fox Business Network host Lou Dobbs that workers at the border are "truck drivers that are being paid a lot of money" and they had better be grateful for their "jobs." He then appeared to dispute the job numbers from the Department of Labor. "Those numbers are not that high, you can't let them get away with that," Trump said. "When I saw the numbers, they were higher than I thought. But those numbers, those numbers are not what we're looking at." The Department of Labor has reportedly released a report that shows that the number of U.S. workers in trucking and transportation rose by 10 percent from 2017 to 2018, to about 140,000.
