First of all: I'm a novice at all this, having been a PHP web programmer only for a short while (first project). So please understand that I'm probably asking a lot of questions. I'm building a site and only have the front page shown (the action=showhome page, which shows the home page, the index page, and the contact page, when called with their respective links). I don't have any menu options (the index page calls in the home and contact pages). I've successfully coded the above, and my site works. The problem arises with the mobile side. When the site is tested on a mobile (which is rather small), it shows the full site (what is to my knowledge what I want). However, what I'd really like is for the mobile to just show the index page, with no other options. So it's a simple call to index.php. This works great on the desktop side, but fails miserably on
