Note You can find tutorials for the various versions of Photoshop on the Internet, but because Photoshop changes so often, you should avoid sites that base tutorials on older versions of the program. # Figuring Out What Photoshop Is Good For Adobe offers Photoshop to consumers at a variety of price points. That's smart because a big part of selling any image or program is marketing. A great deal of that marketing is based on what photographers (and the public in general) think Photoshop is good for. Adobe takes advantage of this perception. In addition to being sold to consumers as an image-editing program, Photoshop is also used by _fine art_ photographers and others who have more _qualitative_ intentions with their images than the _quantitative_

The PSD file format is a very common format for building websites and is used by a large proportion of the web. In other words, the web could not be as big as it is without the PSD. It is not necessary to know all the features of this amazing software, but it's important to know some essential elements of it. If you are already a Photoshop user, you can use it directly. But if you are starting to learn Photoshop, you can contact us and we can help you to learn it properly. We would be very happy to help you! So, with no further delay, here are 10 essential things that Photoshop can do, most of the time. 1. Smart Objects Is the most widely used feature of Photoshop because it is extremely useful. It allows you to work on layers, works on layers with transparency, copy/pasting, exporting and more. Smart Objects let you work with layers with transparency. Smart Objects let you save a Photoshop document in other formats such as PSD files or even in Microsoft Office and the creation of images in PSD is a basic feature for any web designer or even for web developers who are working daily with Photoshop. Smart objects are an extended feature of Photoshop, however. You can think of them as smart layers. Smart objects are basically a group of layers with some specific properties. These properties can be transparency, size, distance between objects, etc. You can edit them as you would with any layer and you can bring them into Photoshop and out of it. 2. Camera Raw Camera Raw is the most exciting feature of Photoshop. It is a high-quality RAW photo editor that provides adjustment layers. These layers allow you to make any changes you want to adjust the color, brightness, contrast, shadows, highlights, etc. Most of the time, photographers use Camera Raw as an alternative to Photoshop's Color Correction section. It lets you adjust the color or highlights and shadows. Also, for those who prefer to use Apple products, there is the option to convert RAW images into Apple's images format. Camera Raw includes all the essential tools for photo editing such as filters, adjustments and tools for resizing. These filters can be applied with the adjustment layer and the adjustment layers. 3. Liquify Liquify is used to manipulate almost any part of an image. It is very useful for

A Soyland house is being sold with just 48 hours left to a £1.5 million reclamation. Mum Mary Burdett of Billingshurst is selling the semi-detached home – described as 'spotlessly clean' in the current issue of 'Yorkshire Living' – as she prepares to move into a retirement home in Sheffield. The property, which boasts views of the Yorkshire Dales, has been advertised in real-estate press to sell for more than £1m. Mum Mary Burdett of Billingshurst is selling the semi-detached home - described as 'spotlessly clean' in the current issue of 'Yorkshire Living' - as she prepares to move into a retirement home The previous owners, holidaymakers Pauline Wilson, left, and Peter Wilson, sold the three-bedroom property to Mary in 2013, after she had nursed her husband Edward through his illness. The family had only been looking to rent out the house for a while but when Edward was diagnosed with a brain tumour, Mrs Burdett decided to retain it. She said: 'Before my husband died, he asked me to look after our daughter, so when the family home fell vacant, I decided to offer it for sale. 'When my husband was diagnosed with brain cancer I bought the home for the future of our daughter so she could live with us. 'I didn't want her to grow up in different environments and not know us so we decided to retain the home and move to one that did meet our needs. 'They are people who we want to be with.' The property, which has already been approached by a number of parties, has been advertised in real-estate press to sell for more than £1m The house has been refurbished inside and out in the last two years, with extensive landscaping including a garden with mature trees, living accommodation and a small pool. The property was comprehensively renovated at a cost of around £150,000 by Mary and her husband and daughter and sons. Mrs Burdett added: 'I had to change our lifestyle and we now live in a quiet residential road called Deevershurst Road, close to a network of cycling and walking paths. 'I don't go out as much as I used to but we
